

Excerpt: ...grew the noise of voices became more distinct, and he could hear sobbing. Then he opened his lids, but the glare of the sunlight struck them shut again; he saw only Mauds face, agonized, white, and wet with tears, looking down into his. They raised him a little more, and he again opened his eyes on the circle of hushed and excited men thronging about him. He saw Brann, with wild, scared face, standing in his cutter and peering over the heads of the crowd. How do you feel now? asked the doctor. Can you hear us? Albert, do you know me? called the girl. His lips moved stiffly, but he smiled a little, and at length whispered slowly, Yes; I guess
