

Christianity Secularism: Which Is the Better Suited to Meet the Wants of Mankind (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Christianity Secularism: Which Is the Better Suited to Meet the Wants of Mankind The following discussion was conducted in writing, the letters appearing, at intervals of a fortnight, in the pages of the Secular Review. The two disputants had met in oral debate on the platform several times previously, when the same questions had been dealt with. But it was thought that more justice could be done to the views respectively advocated, by sitting down to write in the calm atmosphere of the Study than by extemporaneous speaking amid the noise, tumult, and excitement that usually prevail at public meetings. The result is now before the reader. The discussion was conducted during eleven months, the first letter appearing on November 5th, 1880, and the last on October 1st, 1881. That either disputant has made out the best possible case for the side espoused, is more than he can hope for. He has done his best in the space at his disposal - limited, after all, when the extensive nature of the subjects is taken into consideration. Each writer has studiously avoided anything like personality and abuse, and has always kept in view the fact that he was discussing principles, not men. That occasionally strong language may have been employed, and warmth of feeling displayed, is possible; but no offensive epithets have been used by one disputant of the other. That the following pages may be carefully read and studied, is the earnest desire of both. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
